Dear Margaret:

We were exceedingly pleased to know that you are to graduate this month. I was also especially pleased to note your middle name; I didn't know you had one.

The more time rolls by the more I am impressed with the importance of high school graduation; while I later received my A.B. and LL.B. yet those degrees only represented an effort of four years and three years. High school graduation means successful effort for twelve years and is far more important than any other graduation; it gives you the fundamentals, with sufficient school training to move in the best of circles. I want to congratulate you most sincerely upon your graduation and especially because of the high standard of work you have had throughout these twelve years.

Whether you go to college or not is not so important; of course a year or two for the experience and contact is nice; the more of it the better, but right now you have sufficient schooling for all general, practical purposes. Some time the latter part of the summer I would be interested in knowing whether or not you are planning on going further and if so to what school; Bunnie is a Kappa Alpha Theta, and of course we are very much biased in its favor.

Well, Margaret, I didn't intend to write any lengthy letter; I simply mean this as a letter of hearty congratulations and best wishes.

Your Uncle,
